1. By 30 August 1953 all military registration certificates in North Korea were to be taken to local police stations for inspection. The North Korean Mobilization Center was to conduct an investigation from 5-10 September, in order to determine the age limits for military registration in the area south of the 38th parallel occupied by North Korea. Registration cards were to be issued after the investigation.
2. Before August 1953 it was not necessary to have a military registration certificate in the area below the 38th parallel. On 1 August police substations in the Yonan area began issuing military registration certificates. Distribution was completed on 20 August. The military registration certificate was similar in appearance to the temporary citizenship certificate.
